Analysis

The board of Citizens for Maryland Libraries identified the following:

Strengths
- Clear vision/mission and positive history associated with the CML and members
- Partnerships with Maryland and national organizations
- Long history of collaboration with affiliate organizations
- Viewed as a respected and credible organization
- Focus on citizens
- Passionate and energetic volunteer/board base (albeit small)
- Knowledgeable about libraries
- Expertise in advocacy
- Governance and internal controls (formerly a weakness)

Weaknesses
- Invisible when doing our best work (a strength, too)
- Current members who do not KNOW they are members
- Library Directors do not know how CML can help them and their board members/trustees
- Need for more citizen involvement in taking CML messages to their local libraries
- Lack of external marketing focus
- Membership database (with work, could be a strength)
- Limited membership numbers
- Lack of board diversity

Opportunities
- Changing role of libraries (a threat, too)
- To tell the story of how libraries transform their users and their communities
- Further leverage awards and grants
- Help libraries/librarians tell their stories.

Threats
- Lack of diversification of revenue streams/opportunities
• Recruiting informed citizens as members
• Public perception of libraries
• Changing role of libraries
• People may take libraries for granted (difficult when discussing funding)
• Narrowing funding sources/threat to sustainability
• Competition for private funding and grants
• Advocates for/users of libraries come out when threatened, but can be complacent at other times.
